This side of Henrietta St., west of Light St., is improved by several different groups of two story plus attic, two bay wide brick houses with gable roofs, built by various local house carpenters including William and Samuel Harman. The houses were built contemporaneously with John S. Gittings's similar rows to the south along Hamburg and Light Streets and were intended for a working class market. Many are currently being renovated.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This pair of two story plus attic brick houses with gable roofs formed part of the original group of such houses built along this side of Henrietta St. in the 1840's. The houses are currently being restored, but for structural reasons the entire facade has been removed and will be rebuilt. At the time of this description the houses have no facades.

The houses are two and one half stories in height, about 14 1/2' wide, and occupy lots 68' deep. Each house has a two story high, two bay deep rear addition, followed by another, slightly lower in height, two story high, two bay deep addition. 11 Henrietta also has a one story high, one bay deep end section. The houses are constructed in running bond. The low-pitched gable roof had a simple, two-tier brick cornice. There are double chimneys located centrally along the partition wall between the two houses, along both the front and rear gables.

The door and window openings originally had splayed brick lintels and wood sills. 11 Henrietta St. had 1/1 double hung sash in all of the window openings; 13 Henrietta had 6/6 sash in the first and second story window openings and a single pane of glass in the attic windows. The houses sat on high basements, the entrances being reached by four stone steps. An arched alleyway ran between the two houses. Each doorway had a low, flat, single light transom. Each house had a square shaped coal opening located beneath the first floor window.
